SIERRA CLUB LETTERS OF SUPPORT

Dear Commissioners & Commission Staff,

Please accept the following attached letter, which was signed and submitted by over five hundred Sierra Club members and supporters from the state of Michigan, recommending that this Commission support certain efforts by electric utilities to drive transportation electrification.

The attached letter, which is accompanied by additional notes from citizens following their signatures, emphasizes that electrification of our transportation sector has the potential to deliver numerous economic, public health and environmental benefits. To maximize those benefits, our members and supporters urge that the Commission encourage and support utility programs that will reduce barriers to electric vehicle adoption and which are tailored to deliver system-wide grid benefits.

Specifically, these efforts include: the creation of time-variant electricity rates to manage charging and maximize fuel cost savings; targeted efforts for outreach and education of utility customers; and utility-supported deployment of electric vehicle charging infrastructure, where programs result in equitable and strategic deployment, and are designed to improve grid efficiency, integrate clean energy and deliver benefits to all ratepayers.

Respectfully submitted,

Joseph Halso

Re: Case No. 18368

Dear Commissioners and Commission Staff,

Thank you for considering the important issue of electric vehicles and the role of electric utilities.

Electrifying our cars will improve our air quality and reduce our need for foreign oil. They will also spur our state economy. Each year, we send billions of dollars out of state for gasoline. Filling our cars with electricity will not only result in savings for our drivers, but will keep money in our own economy.

In addition, if electric vehicles are plugged in at the right times, they can improve the efficiency and reliability of our electric grid, and ultimately lower rates for all utility customers -- no matter what kind of car they drive. Electric vehicle charging can also easily be matched with clean energy, like Michigan's wind.

I am writing to support utility programs and investments that will make it easier to own an electric vehicle in Michigan and maximize the benefits described above. Specifically, I request that the commission support the following:

- Large-scale deployment of electric vehicle charging infrastructure by electric utilities, so long as utility programs are designed to improve grid efficiency, reduce rates and integrate clean energy.
- The installation of electric vehicle charging stations at workplaces and multi-unit dwellings -- the two locations where cars are most frequently at rest and where drivers often lack access to a plug.
- The development of electric vehicle-friendly electricity rates that will encourage charging at off-peak hours through reduced rates in order to maximize fuel cost savings and grid efficiency.
- The adoption of financial incentives for electric vehicle ownership by electric utilities, such as rebates for the purchase of electric vehicles and electric vehicle charging stations.

If done responsibly, utility-scale electric vehicle initiatives can benefit our state in many ways. I thank you in advance for considering how electric vehicle use can be encouraged for the benefit of all Michigianians.

Respectfully submitted,

I've been driving a Volt for nearly 6 years. As I look to replace my vehicle, I'm disappointed in the lack of new choices for electric plug in hybrid vehicles. 6 years is ample time for innovation and production. Clean energy is essential now and for future generations. The auto industry in the US should be leading in this area if they want to succeed in the auto market. Will we change our focus and choose to lead or simply follow at the back of the line?

Audrey Flanders-Sundstrom

I am installing a large solar array to power my home and plan to buy a future electrical car made in Lake Orion. Michigan. Electric cars are too low to the ground to navigate Michigan snow storms and also the seats are too low for senior citizens who fall into the seats and struggle to climb out. Perhaps you could encourage lift kits to raise the cars a couple on inches for those who need an SUV height.

Dick Simmer

I heard Volvo plans to begin making only electric cars soon - I think that's wonderful - I hope other car makers (American companies) follow suit.

Judy Pelton

American automakers should be leading the way to cleaner vehicles through the use of electric power. Let's step out of the dark ages and step into the future.

Denise Jones

I believe some consumers, like me, will buy vehicles ONLY if electric and hybrid continue to be supported. I will avoid buying a car in a state that penalizes people for seeking to support fuel efficiency and clean energy. Please, move our economy and our technology forward!

Chevrolet has finally decided to sell their Bolt EV in Michigan, and the state has to take seriously the development of quick charging stations throughout the interstate highway system. Michigan is a large state and the Bolt's 234 mileage on one charge will not let owners go from down state to upstate without charging opportunities.

We don't want to be left behind in the march to clean energy. Many countries have nearly all clean energy methods and develop new technologies all the time to figure out how to get away from fossil fuel emissions. If the US doesn't support this move, we will be left in the dust. Don't let the US be the last country and have to buy the technology for clean energy from other countries like China for instance. Let all the electric car companies compete in Michigan, Tesla is a great example. Let them build and sell vehicles in MI and provide more jobs for our people. It's a win-win situation.

I want the quiet hum of an electric pick up. Imagine driving along the highways and byways of America and all you know is the quiet you gain and the exhaust smell you lose. Let's not put America at the bottom of the pile when it comes to innovation and alternative power sources. We should, after all, be at the forefront, right? Because we are such a great nation? Right???

It is important for government and leaders to push forward the downward price of new technology and innovations by choosing to purchase and use them. I have personally done this by buying a hybrid vehicle (and I love it!). I believe the state should also do this.

This summer we are installing solar panels on our roof to reduce our dependence on the burning of fossil fuels. Adding an electric car to the system would be another step away from reliance on polluting fossil fuels. We must all act now to reduce carbon emissions. Please support electric car infrastructure.

Margo Czinski

Where I live, I'm awakened every morning by a neighbor's super noisy motor while he infuses the whole neighborhood's breathing air with toxins sitting in place gunning his engine. I'd like to see an electric car in every garage in neighborhoods, and a parking garage outside of town where they can keep their gas vehicles.
